FEATURED SPEAKERS

Wilbert Rideau

Mr. Rideau spent 23 years on death row in what was once called "the bloodiest prison in the nation," the Louisiana State Penitentiary. He became editor of The Angolite in 1976, a prisoner-produced news magazine, and was the first prisoner to win freedom from censorship by an American prison. Mr. Rideau has received numerous awards for his efforts in journalism while in prison and traveled throughout Louisiana lecturing on journalism and criminal justice. He was released from prison on January 15, 2005.

Kristin Nicole Henning

Ms. Henning is a professor of law at the Georgetown University Law Center in Washington, D.C. Prof. Henning was a lawyer for the D.C. Public Defender Service from 1997—2001, where she helped organize the Juvenile Unit, eventually serving as its Lead Attorney. She has concentrated research in the areas of the role of counsel and juvenile representation.
